

Today starts off quiet but things deteriorate rather quickly once we get around mid-day and the early afternoon. For now, it remains dry so the morning is still a okay for outdoor plans. Once showers begin though, expect the coverage to gradually increase through the afternoon and turn into steadier & heavier areas of rain closer evening. The disturbance moves quickly, departing overnight followed by partial clearing toward morning. Much of the rain falls within the evening, with at least 1" guaranteed and local amounts approaching 3" where heavy rain persists the most. Most streams/creeks likely don't react much due to recent dry conditions but poor drainage & street flooding can certainly occur. Thursday is then much drier albeit quite windy as gusts approach or even just exceed 40 mph at times..Friday remains breezy but quiet otherwise.

HAZARD OVERVIEW
Hazard	Wed	Thu - Fri	Description
Severe Weather	None	Low	Wind gusts near or surpass 40 mph at times late tonight into Thursday, which can bring down tree limbs and result in isolated power outages
Flooding	None	Low	Rain this afternoon/evening can cause minor roadway & street flooding (leaf-clogged drains may exacerbate issues)
Coastal	Low	Moderate	High tide this eve nears 1' above norm, then 2' early Thurs AM. Heavy rain can enhance issues. (see https://coast.noaa.gov/slr/ for details)

NEAR TERM FORECAST
Precip Probability
Wednesday	Any early sun rapidly fades behind incoming clouds. Showers become possible by 12 - 2 PM before turning into steady periods of rain (heavy at times) late into the evening. Turning breezy. 0.50 - 1.00" of Rain High 61 - 65 SE winds 10 - 20 mph, gusts to 25 - 30
Wed Night	Cloudy and windy as periods of steady and heavy rain lift 9 - 11 PM, followed by a lingering shower or two until just after Midnight and partial clearing overnight. 1.00 - 1.50" of Rain (Additional; storm total 1.50-2.50", locally 3-3.5") Low 45 - 50 ESE winds shift WNW, incr 10 - 20 mph, gusts to 35

SHORT RANGE FORECAST
Thursday	Intervals of sun & clouds, windy. Watching for a returning afternoon shower or sprinkle. 30% chance for a Trace - 0.15" of Rain High 53 - 58 Westerly winds 20 - 30 mph, gusts 40 - 50
Thu Night	Turning partly to mostly clear. Still breezy. Low 44 - 48 NW winds 15 - 30 mph, gusts to 35 - 40 early then diminishing through the night
Friday	Mixed sun & clouds. Remaining breezy. High 57 - 61

MEDIUM RANGE FORECAST
Saturday	A good deal of sun and nice. High 61 - 66
Sunday	Partly sunny. Slim risk for a PM shower but leaning toward it being dry. High in the upper 60s

Forecaster: Cody Hewitt